What if you could protect it all?

The importance of critical illness protection
Critical illness

Sometimes life takes an unexpected turn, that’s why the people you love and the lifestyle you lead need protecting. Critical illness cover is designed to protect you and your family from the impact of illnesses such as cancer, heart attack and stroke, and provide financial security in the face of a crisis.

It won’t happen to me

We all know that the life we live today will come to its natural end someday, but one thing we don’t know is if, and when, we will be diagnosed with a critical illness. While no one likes to think about such eventualities, the harsh reality is that an increasing amount of people are becoming critically ill.

We cover 36 critical illnesses and our claims experience in the Middle East shows that 99 percent of all claims submitted are within four definitions of illness1;

Unfortunately, critical illness can strike anyone, at any age, at any time.

In the Middle East:

52% is the average age of our critical illness claimant

41% is the age of our youngest critical illness claimant

6% is the age of our youngest children’s critical illness claimant

The good news is that due to advances in medicine, more people are living longer and surviving critical illnesses such as cancer, cardiovascular disease and stroke, than ever before.2

For example in the USA, about 750,000 people have heart attacks each year of which 85% survive3.

Zurich not only covers you, but your children and future family free of charge.*

*Zurich offers free children’s critical illness cover for up to three children when you take a critical illness benefit.

Did you know?

Dr. Marius Barnard, the heart surgeon who was part of the team that performed the first human-to-human heart transplant in South Africa in 1967, created the concept of critical illness insurance.

“Critical Illness Insurance gives you financial independence when you need it most. You need insurance not only because you are going to die, but because you are going to live.”

Dr. Marius Barnard

Reasons for critical illness claims

Asking the right questions
What does it truly mean to survive a critical illness?
Being diagnosed with a critical illness is the start of an uncertain journey. While you might anticipate the impact to your health, it’s important to ask yourself a few important questions:

If I had to stop working because I became critically ill, how many years of an alternate source of income would I need?

If I became critically ill, where would my family and I live? Would we stay in the Middle East or move back to our home country?

What are the usual day-to-day expenses I need to cover should I become critically ill? Are there any additional costs that I need to consider?

As a family we still need to achieve our goals such as a comfortable retirement, university for our children, etc. so will we keep contributing to these regularly if one of us gets a critical illness?

If you are not adequately protected when a critical illness strikes, you might struggle financially at a time when money should be the last thing on your mind.

The hidden costs of critical illness
It is not unusual for people to be confused between critical illness cover and private medical insurance (PMI). While PMI might cover some or all of your medical bills, there tends to be an annual limit and you might also be required to co-pay a percentage of the bills. But it’s not just about the medical bills.

Reduced income: You may have to reduce your working hours, or stop working, which would result in a loss of income. In a report by Macmillian, almost one in three (30%) people living with critical illness experienced a loss of income as a result of their diagnosis. A third of critical illness survivors (33%) stopped working either permanently or temporarily, depending on recovery times.

Hidden healthcare costs: A significant proportion (41%) of people living with critical illness incur costs for other healthcare needs. These range from prescription medicines not included in personal medical insurance, clinical psychological services, physiotherapy, speech and language therapy, occupational therapy and dietetics.

Lifestyle costs: Over a third (37%) of people incur costs for replacement clothing due to rapid weight loss or gain, specialised equipment, and home modifications, such as wheel chair access.

Other costs: Some costs are difficult to quantify, such as regular trips to medical appointments, travel for specialised treatment, wigs or hairpieces due to hair loss, and increase in household bills such as utilities, groceries and telephone.

Calculating the amount of cover

Critical illness cover pays out a lump sum when you are diagnosed with a critical illness. This cash amount can help to meet your financial needs during treatment and recovery. It could be used to replace a loss of income, repay bank loans, or maintain your family’s current lifestyle.

Recovery from a critical illness is highly individual, and it could take longer than three years for you to fully recover.\(^5\)

One simple way to calculate how much critical illness cover you need is by protecting your annual income.

\text{Annual income} \times 4 \text{ years} = \text{amount of critical illness cover}

Another way to calculate the cover you need is to look at your annual expenses and create a provision for at least four years.

\text{Annual expenses} \times 4 \text{ years} = \text{amount of critical illness cover}

Opposite is an example of living expenses in the UAE for a married couple with two children, with a monthly income of AED 40,000.

Calculations

Annual income

\text{(AED 40,000 x 12)} = \text{AED 480,000}

Critical illness cover

\text{(AED 480,000 x 4)} = \text{AED 1,920,000}

or approximately USD 500,000

Annual expenses

\text{(AED 38,300 x 12)} = \text{AED 459,600}

Critical illness cover

\text{(AED 459,600 x 4)} = \text{AED 1,838,400}

or approximately USD 500,000

Tip:
Countries have different costs of living, so if you move to another country it is important to understand the everyday expenses you would incur, as well as any other hidden costs.
Can I afford it?

The general perception is that life insurance and critical illness cover is very expensive, but it’s not as costly as you might think. For example, if you are a 35 year old male, you can expect to pay no more than a coffee a day (AED 23) to cover yourself for 20 years.

It’s important to consider your budget and your needs when choosing a protection solution. You could choose a relatively cheaper fixed-term protection policy, or a more comprehensive whole of life option which is intended to last your entire lifetime. Below is a table showing the monthly premiums for both a term and whole of life for USD 500,000 (AED 1.84 million).

It’s all about you

Zurich’s recent research on the UAE has shown that

- on average, people are willing to pay 6% of their monthly income in insurance premiums
- with one in five willing to spend at least 10% of their income
- 76% of families are unprotected against loss of regular income.

The report also highlighted that very few government provisions exist for expatriates in the UAE and companies tend to provide limited cover, if any.

Should you move to your home country, you might be eligible for welfare support, but would it be enough to meet your financial commitments?

For example, the UK state benefit is GBP 88.43 weekly.7

With a lack of sufficient government and corporate support, it is essential that you take individual responsibility to secure the financial future of you and your loved ones.

Planning and prevention

It’s not only important for you to seek professional advice on your protection needs, it’s essential to lead a healthy lifestyle and take steps to help prevent or delay a critical illness.

Financial wellbeing

Start financial planning early and take out a protection plan while you are young and healthy.

Prioritise your protection and financial goals with the help of your financial professional.

Remain committed and have regular reviews with your financial professional to ensure you have adequate cover as your circumstances change.

Tip: Have you recently bought a home, or started a family? Go for a financial review with your financial professional.

Health and lifestyle

Know your family medical history as it can help you identify common illnesses, such as heart disease, high blood pressure and stroke, and take the necessary steps to prevent them.

Adopt a healthier diet, get regular exercise, and avoid smoking to help lower your chances of developing heart disease and other common illnesses.

Regular health exams and tests can help you identify problems early or even before they start. By getting the right health services, screenings, and treatments, you are taking steps that help your chances for living a longer, healthier life and decreasing the chance of illness.

Tip: Why not check your healthcare plan to see if you’re eligible for an annual health screening?

Real people, real life experiences

Fortunately, these two Zurich customers had critical illness cover when they were diagnosed and the difference it made to them and their families goes beyond a lump sum payment.

Muskan

> My husband and I were only 29 and weren’t thinking about things like heart attack, cancer, diabetes, or kidney failure. We were just enjoying our life in Dubai.

Gary

> Sometimes Dubai can make you feel like you don’t have to worry about tomorrow, as there’s so much fun to be had today.
